BRINK

CONSTRUCTORS, INC.

Powering Our Communities

Transmission lines transmit high-voltage power from the source to regionally and locally established substations. From these substations, reduced voltage is distributed to wired establishments via underground and overhead distribution lines. A sound distribution line network is the final key component for successfully accessing the power grid and powering our nation's homes, schools, offices, storefronts, etc.

Transmission Capabilities

Our transmission power line crews work nationwide in some of this country's most extreme terrain to ensure power can move throughout the grid. Without crews to build and maintain these large-scale lines, power could not flow from generation to the end-user.

Substation Capabilities

Our substation crews work nationwide to construct this critical piece of electrical infrastructure. Substations allow the large-scale transfer of power from generation to our local communities and are a critical step in providing power to the masses.

Distribution Capabilities

Our distribution power line crews work tirelessly to keep your homes, schools, and businesses powered by constructing new distribution power lines, maintaining existing distribution lines, and repairing existing lines when damage occurs.

New Capabilities for Underground Services

Brink Constructors recently gained another South Dakota company as a sister company in Cable Communication Services, LLC (CCS). CCS is located in Black Hawk, South Dakota and has expertise in all things associated with underground utility and communications installation. The CCS team has in-depth knowledge of all modern construction methods pertaining to the installation of power, coax, fiber, and gas lines.
